Feng Shui Halifax - The oriental concept of Feng Shui literally translates to "wind and water." This complex idea is more easily understood than it is pronounced or defined. Feng Shui must be experienced so as to fully understand its ramifications on the human spirit. The elusive energy called chi is ever existing and surrounds the application and the meaning of Feng Shui. Though it is elusive, chi is all over in the world and is considered one's aesthetic periphery. Feng Shui reveals itself in our viewpoint about landscape and about life. It is the framework we place either consciously or unconsciously all-around our lives.

In Oriental customs, the placing of several items like for instance buildings, graves and furniture is based on the patterns recognized by the flow of chi and yin and yang. Together, these generate both negative and positive effects. Feng Shui is made up of five elements. These elements are water, metal, fire, earth and wood. They combine in their own particular ways to generate either destructive or positive cycles. In order for optimum Feng Shui to be acquired in whatever room, all of the five elements will be involved without being overpowered by whichever one of them separately.

For example, if metal elements as in contemporary furniture pieces dominate an area, the effect could be balanced by introducing wood elements to the room like green plants. Candles could even be integrated so as to form the fire component. If implementing Feng Shui as a design feature in one's house, it is essential to use natural substances if possible. The double aspects of yin and yang always reign supreme in Feng Shui because the basic purpose is to be able to create a harmonious balance among human beings and natural objects.

The bedroom is considered one of the most important rooms in whichever home. The bedroom is crucial to the flow of energy all over the home. Beds themselves are said to have power positions too. Some ancient Asian philosophy believe that the energy from somebody who ever slept in a bed leaves a residue. For optimum Feng Shui, how the bed is placed in relation to the bedroom door must be considered. The door needs to always be visible from the bed. If the door is not visible from the bed, anyone can utilize a mirror in such a way that it will reflect the door. This would restore Feng Shui.

Feng Shui links life and the landscapes together and all things in our globe depend on each other. Eastern philosophies believe that landscapes are breathing and living entities. There are many aspects concerning earth and humanity and heaven that the Western world could consider as individuals in the east do. Just as Shakespeare said in Hamlet, "There are more things in heaven and earth, my dear Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."
